while literature exists on the sense of belonging for students with disabilities no studies directly compare how inclusive practices for high school students with disabilities relate to the sense of belonging of all other students in the school given this gap in the literature my research addresses the following question in schools that are inclusive do all students have a greater sense of belonging i addressed my research question relying on three data sets including the 2017 youth risk behavior survey yrbs from 28 wisconsin high schools that participated in the 2017 yrbs in all 28 schools an administrator completed the degree of inclusion survey on the school's behalf i then rank ordered the degree of inclusion survey scores and selected seven of the highest scoring and seven of the lowest scores and invited these principals for an interview ten of the 14 principals i invited agreed to be interviewed as part of my study within the ten interviews i examined the inclusionary practices shared by the principals that promoted a sense of belonging for all students and i discovered the degree of inclusion survey was not an accurate measure of the high school's inclusionary practices in several cases principals that self reported their degree of inclusion to be lower the principals provided evidence of inclusion and critically reflected on their inclusive practices for students with disabilities compared to some of the principals who rated their degree of inclusion higher within the interviews some of the principals described the positive impact of including students with disabilities had on students with and without disabilities from the interviews i propose a theory of the impact of social desirability of inclusion and the negative impact on all students in which i suggest when principals recognize and acknowledge the need for improved inclusive practices that they tend to respond by providing support not only for students with disabilities but all students the study offers suggestions for future research to further examine if and how inclusive practices influence the sense of belonging for all students inclusive education is a worldwide movement aiming to create one education system that values all children to devise a classroom that welcomes all children irrespective of disability community background sexuality ethnic background etc the current conceptualization of children with special needs has replaced the negative labels of the past which called disabled children as lame crippled less fortunate or mentally retarded the modern concept consider such children as unique whose uniqueness may be noticed in one or the other dimensions vision hearing communication adaptive behaviour etc researches are being conducted across the world so that inclusive education can be made more adequate and thereby prove more useful the present book is a complete treatise on inclusive education with particular emphasis on children with special needs it seeks to find out how information findings from researches on inclusion can be employed to influence inclusive practices in classrooms in a positive way it provides useful tips and strategies to those who need to know as to why whom and how to include children with special needs in regular classroom activities the facts and findings stated in this book in the form of tables pictures boxes and small but separate sections will prove comprehensible inputs for school reforms and reorganizations to achieve full inclusion a detailed bibliography has been included in the book to enable the inquisitive readers to pursue the subject further the students and research scholars of education will find this book highly useful in addition the planners administrators functionaries of sarva shiksha abhiyan and social workers will consider it extremely informative

the space industry is entering a new era of expanded freedom of opportunity to compete unencumbered by government agendas this freedom carries a price the political subsidy culture of the past is dying so failure is not only possible but likely for the unprepared and inefficient for more casual observers the overview of the currents in space commerce history will be invaluable in identifying space related economic opportunities and will enable those more experienced in the field to reevaluate their future the author informs the public of the potential that exists in space related industries while making it clear to practitioners that there is a new imperative coming into existence with the decline and marginality of nasa in commercial space the future economic potential is projected in ways not always perceived by those immersed in day to day operations in many ways the beliefs on which inclusive practices in today s schools a practical guide for classroom teachers is based are responsive to current education trends and challenges in this ninth edition we have continued our efforts to integrate today s expectations for students with our unwavering commitment to inclusive practices a com mitment tempered by our knowledge of and experience with the realities of day to day teaching teachers must be well prepared to instruct their diverse learners but they cannot do the job themselves they must be supported by knowledgeable school
