the purpose of this study was to examine the predictive validity of several variables to determine if the florida computerized placement test reading cpt r score alone or other variables could determine whether or not a student would successfully pass the highest level college preparatory reading course the study examined fall sessions 1997 2004 n 276 079 reading scores for all forms of the cpt to determine at what standard deviation below the cutoff score of 83 a student could still successfully complete the highest level college preparatory reading course according to the college board the 83 scaled score which exempts a student from taking the reading course equates to approximately a 70 on the paper pencil version of the test yet the study revealed that a scaled score of 64 was the average score for fall sessions 1997 2004 which according to previous studies equates to 9 10th reading grade level on the nelson denny reading test napoli raymond 1998 in addition the most frequently obtained scaled score was 75 for fall sessions 1997 2004 which equates to an 11th grade reading level on the nelson denny reading test however the results of this study showed only 61 49 281 out of 79 167 of the upper quartile of students scaled scores 74 passed the highest level college preparatory reading course although a statistically significant relationship was found between the entry test and successful completion of the highest level college preparatory reading course the relationship was small and therefore does not provide very good predictive validity interestingly the study revealed that students who were exempt from the reading course and still enrolled in the course did not have higher passing rates in the course in addition students with higher placement scores did not have significantly higher passing rates in the reading course than students with lower placement scores in fact students with the lowest scaled scores of 11 20 had the highest percentage of successfully completing the highest level college preparatory reading course the placement test scores in reading indicate a large number of students entering florida s community colleges are not prepared for college level courses in addition the results of this study indicated that the placement test did very little to discriminate between levels of students actual reading abilities and predict which students will ultimately pass required remedial developmental reading classes implications from the results of this study affect both high schools and colleges although many first time in college students are not recent high school graduates high schools should be required to include reading as part of the core curriculum separate and distinct from the language arts courses florida high schools need to implement intensive programs of study in reading because students are gravely underprepared for college studies teachers credentialed in reading should be teaching reading courses in all four years of high school diagnostic testing and year end testing should occur each year to chart a student s progress for all four years of high school in addition florida s college entrance reading placement test should be revised so that it provides a comprehensive measurement of college level reading skills
